Flats are an invention whereby people who live in crowded cities can be piled up in layers like pancakes. A flat consists of a collection of living rooms all on one floor. A flat building consists of from six to sixty sets of rooms all under one roof and the ownership of a flat is divided among the tenants who live in the building and does the same as a house. A really expert janitor can run a twelve-flat furnace all winter on a wagon load of coal and can so chill the tenants when they come down to complain that their rooms will seem tropical when they return to them.

Rowland Bros. Have Such Faith In This Dyspepsia Remedy That They Guarantee It.

One of the greatest successes in the sale of medicine has been achieved by Mi-o-na, the standard dyspepsia remedy, and its sale is increasing so rapidly that Rowland Bros., the popular druggists, have hard work to keep a stock on hand. It is very popular with bankers, ministers, lawyers and others whose business or profession keeps them closely confined, while those who have brought on indigestion through irregular eating, worry, or other causes, have found relief in this reliable remedy.

with New Jersey Turkish rugs and back porches where one may have a garden consisting of a geranium. They are also provided with bathtubs and two kinds of water, cold and not so cold. In the cities, owing to the high price of ground, aldermen and building material, the rooms in a flat are sometimes very small—so small that when the daughter is playing the piano the mother has to wash the dishes gently for fear of splashing on the music—so small that the members of the family have to be measured for the bedrooms as they would for vests and anyone weighing over 180 pounds has to work himself into the bathroom by means of glove powder and a shoe horn.

Some flats are very magnificent, however, and contain splendid marble jobbies, sun parlors and air filters, vacuum cleaners, automobile elevators, refrigerated bedrooms and even places where children and dogs can be stored if they are kept perfectly quiet. Such flats rent for from $5,000 to $50,000 a year which, however, does not include the privilege of gossiping with the family next door.

By means of flats people can live with little exertion and great comfort, to say nothing of perfect seclusion. No one will bother them, and when they are at last lowered from the fourth floor late returning spouse that he is a floor to the hearse after a long and brute the women in Numbers 1, 3, 4, peaceful life, the neighbor of twenty 5, 6, 7 and 8 quiver with simultaneous indignation.

Roads Built From Bond Money Must Be Permanent, Says B. F. Harris. Doubts The Value Of Oil

Hon. B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., one of the ablest bankers in the west, and chairman of the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' association, an organization that is co-operating with the farmers of the country in every way to help the tillers of the soil, gives his views as follows in reference to a permanent road system, what these roads should be, how financed, etc.

"The biggest single issue before the people of Illinois today is good roads; biggest not alone in itself, but biggest because the prompt and satisfactory solution of a permanent road system in this state will help solve a half dozen fundamental problems and indirectly affect for good, as well as in dollars and cents, almost every phase of farm, social and industrial life in the state.

We cannot expect to have a real system of roads unless it is based on large units and this is best accomplished by accepting the county and state basis with a few experienced and responsible men in charge in each case. We must have roads that begin and end somewhere. A number of counties in the state are already considering the building of primary roads so that this generation may have the benefit of them.

"Many of the counties in Illinois are presenting to the taxpayers the question of a bond issue for the improvement of their highways. Some have already voted for bonds and still others will shortly start similar proceedings. Before any county votes on a bond issue for this purpose the taxpayers of the county should be thoroughly familiar with what is involved in the question.

The bond issue for a public improvement should be governed by the same considerations which govern a bond issue by any business organization. When a manufacturing concern issues bonds, the money raised is put in permanent improvements in the plant which will last far beyond the life of the bonds, or else no investor would purchase the securities. Bonds for municipal purposes or for public improvements are not always subjected to this acid test, and instances are numerous in this country where bonds for twenty years have been issued for the construction of public roads, and where the type of roads built by the proceeds of the bond issue could not possibly last more than ten years and even then expensive maintenance is continually necessary. In many cases history shows that during the life of such a bond issue the original road has been worn out and rebuilt with the proceeds of subsequent bond issues as many as three times, and still the original bonds are a liability on the community.

When an individual pays out his living or expense money or a community expends its money on experiments it is serious enough but when we mortgage our homes or a county for experiments, or for some purpose which will not pay out before a long time mortgage is due, it spells folly and ruin.

We hear much talk today about making permanent roads by some more or less hasty and so-called inexpensive oil process with which it is certain we are deluding ourselves. Information from a number of authorities gives no satisfactory or encouraging results on this subject. One of the ablest men on the Illinois highway commission has written as follows:

"How long an oil road can be maintained in first class condition and what the cost of such maintenance will be, is a question upon which our department has no definite information, neither have any other of the state departments so far as we have been able to learn, and we have inquired from all of them.

"Many people over the state of Illinois are claiming that they consider the oiling of roads from year to year to permanently settle the good roads problem. Personally, and I think I speak for our entire department when I say that we do not believe that oil will be found to take the place of a hard surface on our main traveled highways. Even if fairly satisfactory, I think the maintenance cost will be found too high on such roads to make it practicable. We all admit that from 70 to 90 per cent of our roads will continue to be earth roads for many years, and I believe that on these roads, especially on that part that receives the heaviest traffic, oiling will be found desirable, but as I have said, I do not believe it will take the place of a hard surface on our main roads, and our main roads are the roads we are proposing to build at this time."

The value of a road today depends not so much on the character of its surface, as upon its ability to carry heavy loads and upon the amount of maintenance required to keep it in good condition. Experience teaches that wherever a road is improved the traffic on it is from three to four times heavier than it was before improvement. This is because vehicles are attracted from every side to the new improved road. The danger is that the people in rural districts in this state will be carried away by the temporary virtue of an oiled earth road and lose sight of the fact that even this requires continual maintenance and expense to keep in condition and cannot withstand the heavy traffic which is so rapidly developing on our country roads. Another consideration is that oiled earth roads will not be maintained by the state as hard surfaces are, and a county which goes in for oiled roads must remember that the burden of maintaining them will perpetually confront the taxpayers.

No road can be a real success unless it is properly drained and graded and this requires time, care and good engineering, no matter what surface coating it may have. Neither oil, gravel, brick or what-not can be put on a road surface with the idea of its having the slightest permanency unless the foundation, the draining be well done and settled. To put oil on the average, ungraded, undrained dirt roads would be a waste of money, except perhaps as a temporary dust-layer.

It would appear that the only value of experiments with oil in this country would be to bring us all to a realization of economy of permanent roads.

The question which should be continually borne in mind, not only by the taxpayers but also by the supervisors, is, "What have you to show for your money after a ten year period?" According to the state highway commission, it costs from $250 to $500 a mile per year to oil roads properly. Five hundred dollars a year will pay the interest on the cost of a permanent road of brick or concrete, which requires practically no maintenance, and which will easily outlast a twenty year bond issue. As a business proposition and from a financial standpoint, there is only one conclusion and that is, the money should go into permanent roads.

Permanent roads lead in a greater number of good directions than the most optimistic enthusiasts can imagine and permanent roads properly constructed and financed are one of the good things which cannot easily be overdone. A county that is not worth a good road is not worth living in."

MOTHERS - - LOOK CHILDREN'S HAIR NEEDS CARE

Seeds of Baldness Come Often From Neglect in Youth.

The hair of some children is naturally backward in healthy development. Growing up so fast, mental and bodily development of these boys and girls makes tremendous demands upon their vital forces. And often times, when there is not enough of that vital force to supply all needs, it is the hair which suffers. Dry, dull, brittle, lifeless-looking hair and dandruff is the result and Mother is distressed because of its lack of beauty.

Parisian Sage is the ideal hair and scalp treatment for growing children as many mothers can testify. This delicate and wholesome scalp vitalizer is entirely harmless and its nourishing ingredients supply just the elements of nutrition that properly invigorate the hair and scalp, dissolve dandruff and promote healthy normal hair growth.

Many mothers have become personal users of Parisian Sage because of the good it has done their children. Certainly a preparation that is tender and wholesome enough to invigorate baby's scalp is a preparation well suited for mother, too. Parisian Sage is sold by Rowland Bros. and many other good druggists, and the cost is trifling.

Hecker-Gleim Wedding

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Gleim of Bradford township Wednesday evening occurred the wedding of their daughter, Miss Christine, to Ernest Hecker, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hecker of near Amboy, the pastor of the Lutheran church of Ashton performing the ceremony.

In the living room a ceremony arch, backed by palms and a picture of the bride's old home painted by the bride, with a white rug underneath outlined by trailing vines of green, was the scene of the ceremony. The wedding party, consisting of the groom and his attendant, Edward Gleim, a brother of the bride, and the bride and her bridesmaid, the groom's sister, Miss Hermina Hecker, were conducted to the arch by the officiating clergyman, as Miss Mabel Gleim, a sister of the bride, played the wedding march. The bride was very charmingly gowned in white charmeuse and lace. A new shade of violet was the color of the bridesmaid's costume wrought in silk, and trimmed in white chiffon, gold lace and buttons.

A two course wedding supper followed the ceremony, the appointments being all in white, in keeping with the snowy whiteness of the outer world. The center of the table was graced by a basket of bride's roses and ferns, while ferns outlined the places. Four young ladies, Misses Mabel Gleim, Emma Hecker, Lina Lancan, and Jean Beila, all gowned in white, served the supper.

This morning Mr. and Mrs. Hecker left for Waterloo Ia., to spend their honeymoon. They will also SKATING AS A SPORT.

The river ice was good this winter and Dixon has seen more skating than in several years past, although it is many winters since the ice fields were black with skaters as they used to be in Dixon. Skating is a wonderful sport and with good weather conditions, Dixon should have splendid skating facilities.

Skating on the river, however, is a dangerous proposition if the weather has not been extremely cold, for springs, with their warm currents, and other conditions make thin spots in the ice. If Dixon people want to skate, and there is no doubt that they do, it would be well worth while for the city officials to make skating facilities better and safer on the river next year. A large space on the ice could be kept free from snow and dirt at a very small expense and the city could see to it that the public was notified as to the parts of the field where it is perfectly safe to skate.

Dr. W. A. Evans, who conducts the health department of the Chicago Tribune, thinks that skating is a panacea for all our winter ills, and the number of ailments that the doctor says that skating will keep you from getting, reads like a patent medicine advertisement, which states that a certain remedy will cure everything from a stone-bruise to appendicitis. This is Dr. Evans' tribute to skating:

Everything in favor of this fad, and nothing can be said against it. I hope everyone will catch it and nobody will get over it.

It is difficult to keep fit in winter. Everybody expects to come out of the winter fat and soft. A man in middle life expects his winter weight to run at least five pounds over scale, and he knows that the excess is fat. He knows, further, that his deep red muscles will be light in color and soft in texture next spring—that is, if he follows his usual habits this winter.

Every woman expects that next spring will see her several shades paler than now.

Every mother knows that she can expect some of her children to have adenoids, enlarged tonsils and neck glands next spring.

Every health officer knows that the winter death rate is the highest of the year. The rate, having started on its upward climb the latter part of November, continuously ascends until the maximum is reached about April 1.

Every physician knows that winter is the season of colds and pneumonia.

For these well recognized conditions there are several reasons. One result is due to one cause and another to another cause. But one cause runs through every situation—excessive number of hours spent quietly in warm, ill ventilated rooms.

Skating offers a remedy. It is a sugar coated pill. There is no better exercise. It calls into play muscles and nerves of every part of the body. It stimulates the heart and quickens the flow of blood. It causes every sluggish portion of the body to be washed clean by fresh blood and lymph. The excess of body heat is easily lost to the surrounding air.

As a means of getting fit and keeping fit throughout the winter, skating is a most worthy craze. Those who become its devotees will develop good, hard muscles. They will not suffer from winter constipation nor from winter headaches. It is good for the complexion. It is a fine remedy for pimples on the face. As a preventative of spring roughening of the skin it has no superior.

As a means of preventing colds and pneumonia it is excellent. The open air contacts of skaters do not cause people to catch cold from people capable of spreading them. One catches pneumonia from pneumonia carriers in warm rooms, but not on a frozen pond. Children who skate will not develop adenoids, tonsils, neck glands or earaches. Furthermore, if the warming fires are built in the open and close warming rooms near skating ponds are avoided, the skating craze will lessen the dangers from diphtheria, scarlet fever and measles.

MANAGEMENT OF A MILLION.

"Aside from yourself, how many people do you think could successfully manage $1,000,000 suddenly acquired?" is the question of an exchange.

"Of course you are sure you could. But how many others among all your acquaintances could?"

A woman in New York state, who is 87 years old and a member of the household of a farmer, has inherited $1,000,000, and the county judge has appointed a committee to take care of it for her, on the ground that she is unable to take care of it herself.

And the question arises: How many of us (beside yourself) would be any better able to manage this amount of money than is the old woman?

The woman of 87 whose habits and tastes have been developed and become fixed in the simple life on the farm would be less likely to squander her money in fast living than anybody else who can be imagined. In her, selfish ambitions would not use this money as a cruel lever to squeeze labor and oppress the public. Nor would vanity tempt her to an extravagant display.

All this could not be said of all of us.

When we think how many hundreds of millions are mismanaging their money, using it only as a means of securing more and of feeding their own selfishness, the conviction is forced that the best management of $1,000,000 does not necessarily lie in increasing it.

It is feared by the court that the old woman might not cling to her million as tightly as most millionaires do. And that would be a terrible calamity to her and the world—wouldn't it?

She might develop a soft spot in her heart and give some of this heap of money away to relieve human suffering and promote human good. And that would not be good financiering—would it?

So a committee is appointed to look after this money, to keep it together in a festering heap, and to increase it—the Lord only knows what for."

Warmer Thursday and colder Friday, according to the Weather Man, who seems to be unable to determine just what he will make the weather. Don't be so undecided, Old Top. Make up your mind to something and stick to it.

Daddy's Bedtime

How Odysseus Introduced Himself To a Queen.

Kneeling, He Implored Her Aid.

"TELL us a Greek story, daddy!" cried Jack and Evelyn.

"When Odysseus, wrapped in his concealing cloud, had seen all of the king's palace he wanted to be decided it was time for him to beg a Greek ship and get on home to Ithaca. So with a rapid step and a light heart he walked right into the palace hall where the king and his queen, with all the senators, were having their dinner. Going straight to the queen, he knelt before her and implored her aid to return to his home. Then, with a low bow, he backed away to a seat by the hearthside, where all the beggars had to sit."

"But Odysseus was a prince!" cried Jack.

"No man of Corfu knew it. For a long time nobody spoke; then an aged statesman said to the king: 'It is not fit that a stranger who asks our hospitality should be kept waiting like a beggar, with none welcoming him. Let him be led to a seat among us, sire, and give him food and wine.' He had very good manners, you see. So the king went and gave his hand to Odysseus, ordering his own son to give up his seat to the stranger. Then Odysseus sat down beside the king and enjoyed his dinner. After all had finished the king told his senators that he would call them in council the next day to help him decide what to do with the stranger."

"Left alone with the king and queen, Odysseus got a good quizzing about who he was and where he came from. Suddenly the queen saw that he had on her son's clothes!"

"They might think he was a thief!" cried Jack, much alarmed.

"The very clothes that she and her maidens had made with their own hands," daddy went on. "So Odysseus told them about his stay on Calypso's island, about the wreck of his raft, his escape by swimming, his long sleep on the sands and the relief the gentle princess gave him. As the king and queen listened they grew more interested and liked him. He was handsome and had beautiful manners, you know. And before the three went to bed that night the queen had promised Odysseus a ship."

"Goody for the queen!" shouted Jack.

"So the next day the king declared a festival. Everybody on the island came to the palace for a big feast. A beautiful ship was picked for Odysseus and a crew of strong young men chosen as rowers. And then the king ordered all sorts of manly sports and games for the rest of the day, because one of the first things the ancients used to do whenever they got a good chance was to play games," daddy finished.

"Two kisses and three hugs for daddy!" cried the children.

CURRENT COMMENT

Barry Record: One of the most encouraging signs of the time is the wave of law enforcement that is sweeping over the state of Illinois. Scores of Illinois cities have found that the liquor laws can be enforced and every day sees an accession to the rank of the communities which are determined to enforce the laws. In this good government crusade one thing stands out most significantly—that the secret of law enforcement is to create strong public sentiment.

Alton Times: Instead of calling Germany to account and after exchange of many notes compelling her to modifying submarine policy and next doing the same things in the case of Austria then next Hungary and next perhaps being called on to repeat the performance for the benefit of Turkey and next Bulgaria, why not issue a circular letter to all the world and get a press bureau to send it out for publication in all the newspapers.

Jacksonville Courier: A French paper avers that the kaiser is suffering from cancer of the throat. If there is any man this side of the grave who can give cancer a worth while battle it is Col. William Hohenzollern. By the time the kaiser gets done with the cancer the latter will have learned a lesson worth while and will hereafter choose care fully when selecting a foe.

Champaign News: A Kansas student of human nature has just proved that the average American will sign anything. He actually got 400 names affixed to a petition to the British throne to shorten the road to Tipperary. Elgin News: It transpires that more married men have enlisted under the volunteer system in England than single men. This tendency is difficult to understand unless it be that married men have been through so much that they have grown reckless. Or perhaps they are just anxious for a chance to get away.

Dramatic Notes

PRINCESS THEATRE

Tonight the Princess will show a picture of exceptional sweep, entitled, "The She Devil," a Reliance three-part production starring Gladys Brockwell in the title role assisted by Constance Talmadge and George Beranger, a pulsating drama of passions with the scenes laid in New York and Paris, unfolding incidents which mould the character of a young American artist. Miss Brockwell's command of expression is superb. The young artist, the story reveals, has just arrived in Paris where friends are giving him a festive welcome at a cafe and Mina, a gypsy character, is called to their table to sing and dance and the young artist and Mina show their mutual interest that is the beginning of this tense drama. The comedy for the evening is "Betty Burton, M. D.," the novel experience of a pretty young lady doctor.

FAMILY THEATRE

Maude Allen will be featured this evening in the film, "The Rug Maker's Daughter," a beautiful picture of the orient, with a thrilling love story. The vaudeville which appeared last evening consisted of W. Felton in an act called "Fun in a Gymnasium." Edwards & Louise introduced a number of catchy songs that were highly entertaining and the DeLuxe Sextette, a company of two men and four ladies gave a most excellent program of operatic and popular songs. They are especially good singers and their solo and ensemble work were exceptionally good. The vaudeville will be repeated this evening and those who failed to attend last evening should visit the Family tonight.

OPERA HOUSE

There will be a special program of photoplays deluxe at the opera house tonight which no one should miss, as follows: "The Greater Courage," a western mining drama in two parts, featuring Jane Novak. "Peter's Awful Crime" a Joker comedy full of hearty laughs, with Gale Henry. "The Meddler," a modern society drama in 2 parts featuring Charles Ogle. "An Heiress for Two," a roaring Nestor comedy with Eddie Lyons, Leo Moran and Elsie Gleason, the star of film producers. There will be no advance in prices for this great show. Coming soon, the J. KILL POLICEMAN IN STRIKE RIOT

Another Man Dying, Many Hurt, at East Chicago.

WAR PLOT SAID TO BE CAUSE

Attempt to Take Newcomers Into Works of Edward Valve Company in an Automobile Proves Unsuccessful—Street Scene of Battle—Trouble Is Not Over.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—One man is dead, another is dying, and five others were shot and seriously wounded in East Chicago, Ind., just across state line, in a desperate battle between strike breakers, police and strikers in the heart of the town.

The battle occurred as thirty men, imported from Chicago to break the strike at the Edwards Valve company's plant, which, officials declare, was due to a German-war plot, were being taken through the town under guard of police. Forty strikers, armed with revolvers and clubs, ambushed the little party and the battle resulted. The East Chicago police, according to reports, started the firing, and Assistant Chief of Police Jack Meehan was the first to fall, shot through the heart.

Five to Hospitals.

An unidentified strike breaker was shot through the body, and, after the battle was over and the strikers retreated, was rushed to a hospital, where it was said he had but a few moments to live. The streets were littered with the fallen men, and it is reported that several strikers, slightly wounded, were carried away by their friends. Five wounded men were taken to hospitals.

Constantine Kohusky, an East Chicago policeman, was shot through the leg and seriously wounded.

The strike at the Edwards plant, which has been manufacturing shrapnel for the allies, began two weeks ago. Its president frankly charged that the strike was due to a pro-German plot, and refused to deal with the men. Four hundred of them went out at the time.

No Violence at Plant.

"I have no definite information about the riot," said President O. C. Oleson of the company over the long-distance telephone from his office in East Chicago. "All we know is that a riot has occurred. Yes, our plant has been running for the last week. We closed down for several days and then reopened."

"The riot took place about three-quarters of a mile from the plant. There is no violence around the plant. They have a few pickets here, but that is all."

CHAPTER XXIV—Lanyard carries a fare in his taxi.

CHAPTER XXV—The fare turns out to be Wertheimer, who advises him to 'ware' Bannan, and proposes to join forces with him. Lanyard refuses.

CHAPTER XXVI—Lanyard is unsuccessfully attacked by The Pack.

CHAPTER XXVII.

On the Back Trail.

Innocent of either satisfaction or any sort of exultation over his escape and the downfall of his enemies, Lanyard's mood was dark. The longer he pondered the affair, the more inexplicable it bulked to his understanding. He had never expected to defy the Pack and get off lightly; but he had anticipated no overt attempt to discipline him pending proof of insincerity in his purpose to reform. A retired competitor isn't to be feared.

Either Wertheimer hadn't believed him or Bannan had rejected the report presumably carried him by Lucy Shannon—at all events, they hadn't waited for Lanyard to demonstrate his will. They hadn't bothered to declare war; with less warning than a rattlesnake gives they had struck—out of the dark—at his back.

And so—Lanyard swore grimly—even so would he strike, now that it was his turn. In this temper he arrived, past one in the morning, under the walls of the Ombre place.

Now if it were violation of the tenets of his craft to revisit premises once successfully entered, he showed them at least the prudent deference of selecting a fresh point of attack—one chosen earlier. In the course of his first circuit of the walls. It hadn't escaped him then that this brick-and-plaster construction was in bad repair; he had marked down several places where the weather had eaten the outer coat of plaster altogether away. At the first of these, midway between the avenue and the junction of the side streets, he hesitated.

As he had foreseen, the mortar that bound the wall together was crumbling. It was no great task to work loose one of the exposed bricks, establishing a foothold to a position whence his other hand, gloved, could seize the top of the wall, cast the ulster neatly over the glass-paned upper curbing and, thus protected, swing himself bodily atop the thing.

But there, momentarily, he paused in doubt. In that singularly exposed and comfortless position, poised ten feet above the lifeless street on the one hand and with the black mystery of the neglected park on the other, he was seized and shaken by a sudden and unexpressed revulsion of feeling in no way colored by any sort of alarm.

He was afraid of himself—he, the grim and deadly thing that walked by night, the Lone Wolf, the creature of pillage and rapine, the scourged slave of that self which knew no law. And for a little longer he lingered there in trembling, not knowing whether he was to go back or go forward.

Then slowly that terror passed like the lifting of a nightmare from the brain of a sleeper, and with a start, with a little shiver and a sigh, Lanyard went forward as one driven.

Dropping to the ground with an impact muffled by the soft, damp turf, he made himself one with the shadows of the park, as silent, as intangible, as fugitive as they, until presently he came out beneath the stars, on the open lawn running up to the wing that housed the library.

From one of the library windows a shallow stone balcony jutted out eight feet above the lawn—a height so insignificant that, with one bound, grasping its stone balustrade, the adventurer was upon it in a brace of seconds.

Nor did the windows—long French windows, opening inward—offer any considerable obstacle; a penknife expeditiously removed the old, dry putty round one of the small, lozenge-shaped panes, then dislodged the pane itself; his hand through this opening readily found and turned the latch; a cautious pressure created an opening between the two wings wide enough to permit the passage of his body, and—he stood inside the library, refastening the latch.

He had made no sound and, thanks to thorough prior acquaintance with the combination of the safe, he needed no light. The screen of cinnabar afforded him all the protection he required; and because he meant to accomplish his purpose and be out of the house with almost inconceivable swiftness, he didn't even trouble to explore the household—beyond a swift and casual survey of the adjoining salons.

The clock in the reception hall chimed the three-quarters as he encased himself between screen and safe and grasped the combination-knob. But he did not turn it. That mellow music died out slowly and left him unstriding in the silence and gloom, his eyes staring wide into blackness at nothing, his jaw set and rigid, his knitted forehead damp with sweat, his hands so tightly clenched that the nails bit painfully into the flesh of his palms, while he looked back over the abyss that yawned between the Lone Wolf of tonight and the man who had, within the week, knelt before that safe in company with the woman he loved, bent on making restitution of his theft that his soul might be saved through her faith in him.

He closed his eyes to shut out the accusing darkness, and knelt on unstriding, save as he shuddered now and again with the sickness of a strong man rent in the conflict of man's dual nature.

Minutes passed without his knowledge in the crisis of that struggle. But at length he grew more calm; his hands relaxed, the muscles of his brow smoothed out, he breathed more slowly and more deeply, his set lips parted and through them a profound sigh escaped, whispering through the stillness.

A great weariness was upon him as he rose slowly and heavily from the floor and stood erect, no longer the slave of self, but his master, free at last and for all time from that ancient evil which so long had held his soul in bondage.

And then, in that moment of victory, through the deep hush reigning in that house, he heard the sound of an incautious footfall on the parquet of the hallway.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A Meeting by the Safe.

It was a sound so slight, so very small and still, that only a supersensitive sense of hearing could have distinguished it from the confused multiplicity of almost inaudible, interwoven sounds, that go to make the slumberous quiet by night of that essentially animate organism, the human habitation.

Lanyard, whose training had taught him how to listen, had early learned that the nocturnal hush of one Louise is to be differentiated from that of another as readily as the respiration of two sleepers may be discriminated. He knew that every house had its singular cadence, its own gentle movement of muted but harmonious sounds wherein the introduction of alien sounds produced instant discord.

Now, in the muted voice of this vast mansion, he had detected a little flutter of discordance, sounding a note of stealth—such a note as no move of his own since entering had evoked.

And while Lanyard stood at alert attention the sound was repeated from a point less distant. This new intruder was moving through the salons to the library.

In two swift strides Lanyard left the shelter of the screen and enscathed himself in the recess of one of the tall windows, behind its heavy velvet hangings.

That movement could have been timed no more precisely had it been rehearsed. He was barely in hiding when a shape of shadow slipped into the library, paused beside the massive desk and raked the room with a powerful flash-lamp.

Its initial glare struck full and dazzlingly into Lanyard's eyes as he peered through a narrow opening in the portiere.

When at length his vision cleared the other was kneeling in turn before the safe—or, rather, rising from a kneeling position there, for more light was needed, and this one, lacking the patience of his studious caution, turned back to the desk, seized the electric reading lamp and transferred it to the floor between the safe and the screen.

But even before she had put down the lamp Lanyard had recognized the woman; before the swift flood of light followed the dull click of the switch he knew that she was Lucy Shannon. He felt dazed, half-stunned, suffocated—much as he had felt with Greggs' week-old night at Troyon's.

For an instant he experienced real difficulty about breathing and was conscious of a sickish throbbing in his temples, while the pounding in his bosom was as the tolling of a great bell. He stared, swaying like a man who has been struck a heavy blow.

In one breath he swore it could not, and knew it must, be she.

The light, gushing from the opaque hood, made the safe door a glare, and was thrown back into her intent young face. Even so, he would have recognized the sharp silhouette cut by her lithe, sweet body against the glow, the poise of her head, the carriage of her shoulders, the gracious bosom rounding her tailored coat.

She was all in black, even to her gloved hands—no trace of white or any color showing on her person but the fair curve of her cheek below the mask and the red of her lips. And if that were not enough, the intelligence with which she attacked the combination and the confident, businesslike precision that distinguished her every action proved her an apt pupil in that business.

His thoughts were all weltering in misery and confusion. He knew what this encounter meant, appreciated that it explained many things he would have thought questionable had not the strength of his infatuation forbade him to consider them at all; but in the pain and anguish of that moment he could entertain but one thought, which possessed him altogether—the thought that she must somehow be saved from the crime she contemplated.

But while he delayed, shrinking from the necessity of discovering himself to her, it was made clear that she had become sensitive to his presence.

He had made no sound since she entered, had not even stirred; but somehow she had divined that someone was there, in the recess of the window, watching her.

In the act of opening the safe—working the combination from that very sheet of paper on which he had made memoranda of its sequence—he saw her pause, freeze to a pose of attention, then turn to stare directly at the portiere behind which he was concealed. And through an eternal second he watched her kneeling there, so still that she seemed not even to breathe, her gaze fixed and level, waiting.

"Lucy—You—"

ing for some sound, some tremor of the drapery folds to confirm her suspicion.

When at length she stirred it was to rise in one swift, alert movement. And now as she paused with her slight shoulders squared and her head thrown back defiantly, challengingly, he knew she knew he was there.

As if without will of his own, but drawn irresistibly by her gaze, he stepped out from hiding.

And since he was no more the Lone Wolf, but now a simple man in agony, with no consideration for their situation, with no thought for the fact that they were both housebreakers and that the slightest sound might raise a hue and cry upon them, he took a faltering step toward her, stopped, flung forth a hand with a gesture of appeal, and stammered:

"Lucy—you—"

His voice broke. He waited.

She didn't answer other than to recoil as though he had offered to strike her, and she commenced to retreat, wearing a look of utter grief and wretchedness, until presently the table stopped her, and she leaned back against it, as if glad of the support.

"Oh!" she cried, trembling—"why—why did you do it?"

He might have answered her in kind, but self-justification passed his power. He couldn't say: "Because tonight you made me lose faith in life itself, and I thought to forget you by going to the devil the quickest way I knew—this way!"—though that was true. He couldn't say: "Because, a thief from boyhood, habit proved too strong for me, and I couldn't withstand temptation!"—for that was untrue.

He could only hang his head and wretchedly confess: "I don't know."

As if he hadn't spoken, as if she hadn't heard, she cried again: "Why—oh, why—did you do it? I was so proud of you, so sure of you—the man who had turned straight because of me! It compensated. But now!"

Her voice broke in a short, dry sob. "Compensated?" he repeated stupidly.

"Yes, compensated." She threw back her head with a gesture of impatience. "For this—don't you understand?—for this that I'm doing! You don't suppose I've come here of my non for any reason but to try to save you from him? I knew something of his power, and you didn't; I knew, if I went away with you he'd never rest until he had you murdered, if he had to follow you round the world to do it! And I thought if I could mislead him by lies for a little time—long enough to give you opportunity to leave France—I thought—perhaps—if I could overcome my terror of him—I might be able to communicate with the police, denounce him."

She hesitated, breathless and appealing. At her first words he had drawn close to her; and all their speech was couched in muted murmurings, barely more than whisperings. And this was quite instinctive, for in the passion of that meeting both had been carried beyond considerations of prudence, their most coherent thought being that now, once and for all time, all misunderstanding between them must be done away with.

And now, as naturally as though they had been lovers always, Lanyard possessed himself of her hand.

"You cared as much as that!" he said.

"I love you," she declared tensely—"I love you so much I am ready to sacrifice everything for you—life, liberty, honor—"

"Hush, dearest, hush!" he begged, half distracted between joy and pain.

"I mean it, if honor could hold me back, do you think I would have broken in here tonight to rob for Bannan?"

"He sent you, eh?" Lanyard commented in a dangerous voice.

"He was too cunning for me. I was afraid to tell you. I meant to tell—to warn you this evening in the cab. And then I thought perhaps if I were cold and distant and let you go on believing me the worst of women—perhaps you would go away, save yourself, forget me."

"Never!"

"I tried to carry out my program of lying to him, but he wouldn't have it. They forced the truth from me by threats."

"They wouldn't dare—"

"They dare anything, I tell you. But it wasn't threats of personal injury to me, but to you, if I refused to tell them the truth, the whole truth. They knew enough of what had happened, through their spies, to go on, and they tormented and bullied me until I broke down and told them everything. And when they learned you had replaced the jewels here, Bannan told me I must return and bring them to him. He said if I refused he'd have you killed before morning. I held out until tonight; then, just as I was going to bed, he received a telephone message, and told me you were driving a taxi and were being followed by Apaches and wouldn't live till daylight if I refused."

"You came alone?"

"No. Three men brought me to the gate. They're waiting outside in the park."

"Apaches?"

"Two of them—I presume they're Apaches, at least. The third is Captain Ekstrom."

"Ekstrom?" Lanyard cried in despair. "Is he—"

The dull but heavy slam of the great front doors silenced him.

A RESPECTED ILLINOIS WOMAN SPEAKS.

Jacksonville, Ill.—"I can say Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a fine medicine. I had stomach trouble, and having read of what 'Golden Medical Discovery' would do I procured one bottle at the drug store. It helped me at once. I never had any medicine help me as much as this did. When I began using it I had such pain and misery that I could not eat a good meal and sometimes I could not hold food on my stomach. This remedy relieved all the bad feelings and cured me. I have had no return of the trouble. This medicine was the only one I used. My mother was a weak woman, she used 'Golden Medical Discovery' and thought very highly of it. It is a 'standby' in the family."—Mrs. LUELLA SANDERS, 609 East North St., Jacksonville, Ill.

A HUMAN CHURN!

When the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach. (See Dr. Pierce's free Medical Adviser, page 45.) In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clear—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys clog. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of lousy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alternative in blood-taint of any character.

"Oh, you mean a divining rod," interrupted the grouch.

"Yes," replied the old fogey. "Have you ever seen one?"

"No," replied the grouch. "But my father used to have a rod that could make the tears flow."

Some wives are very dear to their husbands, and others are merely very expensive.

The trouble with the man who has nothing to say is that he isn't happy until he says it.

When they were naming things somebody played a great joke on the women when he called those old head shawls "fascinators." A "fascinator" was a thing that could make a good looking girl resemble something the cat dragged in.

Women are so contrary that if the street cars were to run backward the women would turn around and get off the other way.

Any old man can tell you that he has had a lot of trouble in his time, most of which never happened.

Any man who had to fight all the tough kids in the neighborhood because his mother made him wear curls when he went to school can sympathize with the poor poodle whose owner makes it wear a sweater so the other dogs will regard it as easy picking.

One good thing about walking in the straight and narrow path is that a fellow is never in any danger of being caught in a crush.

The difference between a man and a gun is that you can't say that you didn't know the man was loaded.

CARRANZA EDICT OUTLAWS VILLA

Any One Is Authorized to Slay
Bandit Leader.

TWO OTHER GENERALS NAMED

Full Text of Proclamation by First Chief Is Received—Step Taken as Result of Massacre of 18 American Mining Men—None of Bandits Has Been Caught.

Washington, Jan. 20.—General Carranza sent to the Mexican embassy here the text of a decree he has issued empowering any citizens of Mexico to kill on sight General Francisco Villa, Rafael Castro and Pablo Lopez, whom he charges with having headed the band of murders at Santa Ysabel. The text of the decree follows:

Text of Decree.

"I, Venustiano Carranza, first chief of the Constitutional army and depository of the executive power of Mexico, making use of these extraordinary powers with which I am vested and in view of the frequency with which outrageous crimes are being committed by bands of outlaws scattered in various parts of the republic even after the annihilation of the armies of the reactionaries by the Constitutional forces, believe that the situation thus created calls for the extremity of energetic measures of suppression in order that such crimes shall be met by severest punishment to those who are responsible for them. In view of the recent attack on a railway train at a point distant eight kilometers from Santa Ysabel, in the state of Chihuahua, by bandits led by Rafael Castro and Pablo Lopez, members of the forces commanded by Francisco Villa, under whose orders they were operating and in accordance with the precedent established by the Constitutional government in similar cases occurring in the past, I have seen fit to issue the following decree:

"Article 1. The reactionary leader and ex-General Francisco Villa is declared to be outside the pale of the law.

"Article 2. The reactionary leaders, ex-General Rafael Castro and ex-Colonel Pablo Lopez, are hereby declared to be outside the pale of the law.

"Article 3. Any citizen of Mexico is empowered hereby to arrest the leaders, Francisco Villa, Rafael Castro and Pablo Lopez and to execute them without any formality of the law. But the citizen performing such function shall make a record in writing describing in detail the occurrence and setting forth the proofs of the identity of the outlaws and proof of the execution. "Constitution and Reform.

"Given in the City of Queretaro on the 14th day of January, 1916.

"VENUSTIANO CARRANZA."

None of Bandits Captured.

Thus far, however, according to reports received at the state department, none of the bandits known to have been with the band of murderers has been captured or punished, in accordance with the demands of the United States. In his report to the department, telling of the identification in his presence of the bodies of Rodriguez and Bacach Valles, former villista bandits, who were shot and their remains brought to Juarez for public exhibition.

Collector of Customs Cobb at El Paso states that Rodriguez is known to have been blowing up bridges in another locality from that where the massacre occurred and that there is nothing to show that Valles, known as Villa's "butcher," was involved. Trials and Montenegro have been broken rear. "they were secretly aiding them."

London, Jan. 20.—Members of the French and British governments held another war conference in Downing street.

France was represented by Premier Briand, Jules Cambon, general under-secretary of the foreign ministry, and Alexandre Millerand, former minister of war. For the British government Premier Asquith, War Secretary Kitchener, Foreign Secretary Grey and A. J. Balfour, first lord of the admiralty, were present.

IT'S SURPRISING

THAT SO MANY DIXON PEOPLE
FAIL TO RECOGNIZE KIDNEY WEAKNESS

Are you a bad back victim? Suffer twinges; headaches, dizzy spells? Go to bed tired—get up tired? It's surprising how few suspect the kidneys. It's surprising how few know what to do. Kidney trouble needs kidney treatment.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. Have convinced Dixon people of their merit.

Here's a Dixon case; Dixon testimony. Kidney sufferers hereabouts should read it.

L. S. Fultz, Prop., of grocery store, 711 Depot Ave., Dixon, says: "Occasionally I get weak through my back and when I have such an attack Doan's Kidney Pills always relieve the trouble. They are an excellent medicine for kidney complaint and I highly recommend them."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fultz had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE SWEEPS WIDE FRONT

Violent Attacks In Bessarabia Continue--Turks Beaten.

London, Jan. 20.—Violent new Russian attacks, both in Bessarabia and the Caucasus, are announced. Practically refuting its own official statement that the Russians in Bessarabia had been decisively defeated in a twenty-four day battle, Vienna admits that a new offensive has been started by the Slavs east of Czernowitz.

Four terrific Russian attacks were made at several places, according to Vienna, but all are declared to have been repulsed.

A great victory for the Russians in the Caucasus, where for weeks they have been pushing back the Turks, is announced by Petrograd. A semi-official statement says that the Russians have taken the Turkish positions in the Caucasus, capturing twelve guns, nine machine guns, thousands of shells, and more than a million cartridges.

Fifty officers and many men were taken prisoners. The statement claims that entire Turkish regiments were annihilated.

MONTENEGRO SPURNS AUSTRIAN OVERTURES

Teutonic Terms Are Declared to Be Too Drastic.

London, Jan. 20.—The Montenegrin situation has assumed new possibilities with the report of the ending of peace negotiations. Official announcement is made at the French embassy that peace negotiations between Austria and Montenegro have been broken off. Austria's conditions were found unacceptable by the Montenegrin government.

King Nicholas will go to Italy. One dispatch says the King has returned to Cetinje.

Charges that Montenegro had been guilty of treachery to the entente allies were denounced as "basely untrue" at the Montenegrin legation here. The legation confirmed the Vienna announcement that the Montenegrin army had capitulated, but issued an official statement saying that "Montenegro surrendered only because the munitions of the army were exhausted."

A Rome dispatch, believed to have been inspired, branded as false the report that the Montenegrins had made a heroic fight against the Austrians. "On the contrary," the dispatch read, "they were secretly aiding them."

ARE DEADLOCKED OVER MAIL

Great Britain and Sweden Unable to Reach an Agreement.

London, Jan. 20.—The controversy between Great Britain and Sweden over the detention of mails has reached an impasse with both sides stubbornly refusing to allow its rival's mail to be expedited through the respective countries.

Sweden now is holding an enormous quantity of the English post destined for Russia, while mail is being taken from every Scandinavian liner brought into Kildwall, Scotland. Vigorous representations are being made by the diplomats of both countries, but the controversy presents so many novel features that extensive debates may be expected. Neutral diplomatic circles here are more concerned over the detention of mails than any other fact arising from the British blockade.

Wife of Former Pugilist Tries to End Her Life by Gas.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Catherine Schreck, wife of "Mike" Schreck, at one time a well known Chicago pugilist, decided that death was preferable to living any longer as his wife.

At the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank R. Besser, Mrs. Schreck locked herself in a room and turned on the gas. She was later revived. Mrs. Schreck says her pugilist husband was not only cruel to herself and child but does not support them.

EXPENSES CHARGED TWICE, ACCUSATION

Anonymous Letter Tells Fergus Attorney About It.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 20.—An anonymous letter, purporting to show that the special legislative committee which inspected the state university during the session of the Forty-ninth general assembly spent money freely and charged the state up with it twice, received by Attorney Fayette B. Munro, was introduced by him in the hearing of the three remaining J. B. Ferguson suits in the Sangamon circuit court.

Attorney Munro offered the letter, saying it contained the information that an item of $912.15 in the annual report of the university was given to entertainment of the special committee when the state had already appropriated $3,265 for feeding and housing the assemblymen.

"Not only that, but a bill of $1,922 for Pullman cars and conveniences was received after it was all over," said Mr. Munro. "Where the money went nobody seems to know."

MRS. WATERS WAS POISONED

Husband of Woman Who Died Under Mysterious Circumstances Held.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Dr. William D. McNally, Cook County Coroner Peter H. Hoffman's chemist, completed his chemical analysis of the vital organs of Mrs. Ida B. Waters, who died at her home in Mattoon Oct. 16, 1915. He announced that he found strychnine "sufficient to kill." Her husband, Joseph Waters, was taken into custody at the time of Mrs. Waters' death.

Dr. McNally made the investigation at the request of William J. Moran, Jr., of Coles county.

Mrs. Nathan Cortright is much improved after a severe attack of la grippe.
